Carthy's beautiful romantic drama, "If I Were King," was seen last night at the Academy of Music, with Lester Lonergan in the role made famules by Mr. Sothern, The play is one of the beat since Bulwer's "Lady of Lyons," and the beat since Bulwer's "Lady of Lyons," and the lines are couched in beautiful language.

Mr. Lonergan enacted tha tole of Francois Villon with much skill, and read the poeting and read the poeting and read the poeting appreciation of their meaning. He is by no means new to Richmond, having been seen herrothree seasons ago in Bernard Shaw's "Candida," and before that with Kathryn Kidder and Madame Modjeska for three successive seasons, besides having supported many other well known stars His performance last evening delighted every one present, and he should have had a much larger audience.

Miss Alice Treat Hunt played Katherine de Vanelles charmingly, and was convincing and finished in her work. Westoff Saunders, with a clover make up, gave a remarkably well sustained sketch of Louis XL, and shared the honors with the star. What He Says of It.

Mr. Lonergan was seen in his dicasing-room by a Times-Dispatch reporter last evening before the performance, and questioned concerning the stories regarding his linear eration at Wilmington, Del. Fie discussed the matter freely. His account of the star is as follows:

"I can state the facts in a very few words if you wish. In the early part of the season I was leading man with Nance O'. elll, and became very ambitious to star in 'If I Were King,' the rights of which I had obtained from Mr. Sothern, and lacked the necessary funds to produce the play. I heard from some friends that a Mrs. Hough, living in a small Massachusetts town and quite wea thy, had an ambitious daughter, who was anxious to get a start on the stage, and that I might obtain the necessary funds by conferring with this lady, I accordingly saw her and her daughter, whom I found a very charming young lady, and the upshot of it all was that the money was obtained, Mrs. Hough Parnishing $5,000 and I $1,000. I had the company incorporated for their protection, and we opened in New England, playing to light business, but I knew after we reached the South, where the play had not been seen, business would be better.

Bijou Next Week.

Bijou Next Week.

The Bijou will offer the coming week an atraction that, it is predicted, will appeal to all lovers of melodrama, and record business is expected. Charles E. Blaney is the author of "The Boy Behind the Gun," in which the popular and well-known little comedian, Harry Clay Blaney, is seen as the star. Every city visited has received it cordially. With its massive scenic and novel electrical equipment, its large company, together with an interesting story of romance and all-venture, it has taken its place among some of the most important of the high-class melodramas.
